Allianz appoints new health, safety & quality manager

Allianz Engineering Inspection Services announces the appointment of Jane Nash

Allianz Engineering Inspection Services (AEIS) today announces the appointment of Jane Nash as its new health, safety and quality manager in the Engineering, Construction and Power business.

Jane will oversee the three core objectives of Safety, Competence and Compliance in Allianz's inspection service, ensuring all checks are carried out safely.

Jane brings with her a wealth of health and safety experience, having previously held senior roles at General Electric, Smiths Industries and Baker Hughes.

She formally started her new role in January 2021 reporting to Peter Carless, chief engineer at AEIS who said:

“We are very happy to bring Jane to the team. She has been at AEIS for a few months now and has already shown how well she fits in.

“At Allianz, we are working collaboratively to simplify and streamline processes, but at the same time, changing the way in which we work, thereby enabling a better work/life balance. Jane will be a driving force behind that in the health and safety inspections business.

“I look forward to continuing to work with Jane as an integral part of AEIS’ growth in the future.”
